JOHNNY.

"Johnny, you come right here and stay in the house!" commanded a fond North End mother, to her hope and joy.

"I ain't doin' nawthin', only sittin' on the stoop. Honest, ma, dat's all."

"Well, the rest of the boys will be passing soon and will be on their way to the river swimming."

"I wouldn't go near the river, ma, because I can't swim," and Johnny winked at himself.

Johnny's mother went about her household duties and soon forgot all concerning her boy.

Meanwhile Johnny had joined the gang and was soon yelling like a Comanche Indian in the altogether upon the banks of the "swimmin' hole."

When he returned he sat in the sun on the stoop until he thought his hair was dry. His mother, however, noticed the unusual cleanliness of his face for that time of day, dug her hand in his hair, found it damp, and it was the old man's razor atop for Johnnie. And he got it.—Albany Journal.

REASONABLE.

"Well, I'm not surprised," said Mr. B. "She's been giving me a piece of it for the last 23 years, and she did not have a whole lot to start on."—Washington Star.

It's awful queer how you can't recognize a familiar shape when it is in a bathing suit.—N. Y. Press.
